

Requests for the Boulder Civic Area

September 12, 2012

Growing up Boulder

On a Sunday afternoon in August 2012, a GUB coordinator interviewed one English-speaking and two Spanish-speaking families (totaling ten people) who were picnicking in Eben G. Fine park. The park was packed with more than 100 people of all ages and ethnicities that day. The interviewer asked the families what drew them to the park, and what they would inspire them to come to the civic area. Below is a summary of their responses.

Farmers' Market:

- More seating
- More open space

Band Shell:

- Hoola hoops and jump ropes
- More integrated into area

Families and children:

- Grills-families can barbeque
- Lawn games- i.e. horseshoes, ping pong, shuffle board
- Small Bike track
- Play grounds
- Picnic areas
- Public restrooms
- Water feature that is ornamental but kids can play in it too
